To Find Washington Case Law

West's[®] WASHINGTON DIGEST, 2d

THE ALL-NEW INDEX TO WASHINGTON CASE LAW

In recent years, whole new areas of law have emerged in Washington and other jurisdictions. These areas include Condominium Law, Consumer Protection, Products Liability, and Securities Regulation.

Furthermore, earlier questions and issues are being redefined and expanded.

With all these changes in the law, every Washington lawyer faces a growing challenge to find relevant case law.

WEST'S WASHINGTON DIGEST, 2d
MEETS THAT CHALLENGE!

Now you have an entirely new index to Washington case law to speed you to relevant law.

COMPLETE

WEST'S WASHINGTON DIGEST, 2d, makes every facet of case law accessible for your research. Over 44 new or revised Digest Topics have been added to the Key Number Classification System, providing you with a thorough index to case law.

CONVENIENT

WEST'S WASHINGTON DIGEST, 2d, covers the reported state cases and the federal cases arising in Washington from 1854 forward, enabling you to research the body of Washington case law with one reference.

FAST

WEST'S WASHINGTON DIGEST, 2d, provides five different routes to cases on point: the Descriptive Word Index, Words and Phrases Table, Topic Analysis, Table of Cases, and the Defendant/Plaintiff Table. Each route is quick and each will usher you to an exact area of law.

Contact your local West representative now to learn how easy it is to own and to use the new WEST'S WASHINGTON DIGEST, 2d—the complete, fast index to modern Washington case law.

The True Alchemy

For several months now, I have urged the members of the Association to provide input to the members of the Board of Governors about what things they would like the Bar Association to do. I cannot claim that this column has necessarily been the catalyst for greater communication from members, but there has been a good deal of letter-writing going on between Bar members and the Board.

Perhaps the greatest credit belongs to several members of our Board who, at their own expense, send out newsletters to their constituents discussing the work of the Board. In many of the smaller congressional districts, individual Board members are able to mail a newsletter to each attorney member in their district. In larger congressional districts, many of the Board members send such newsletters to several hundred members of the Association and also provide links to local county bar associations. The result has been that many members are now contacting members of the Board with very thoughtful remarks and suggestions for further action by the Board of Governors.

One of the recurring things we have heard from Bar members and others is the apparently increasing lack of civility of lawyers to opposing counsel, witnesses and parties litigant.

Recently I received a letter from a physician who practices in Oregon. He was deposed in a Washington lawsuit. He claimed he was called as a factual witness because he was the plaintiff's treating physician. He felt he had been treated discourteously by both plaintiff and defense counsel and wrote to me expressing his concerns about the alleged mistreatment. In other situations, I have overheard or participated in conversations where the issue of lawyer civility to other lawyers has been discussed.

The size of the Bar Association has dramatically increased, and with the Bar's growth has apparently come an erosion of the respect generally accorded lawyers, witnesses and parties litigant by counsel. Perhaps the sheer size of the Bar has contributed to this problem. When lawyers basically do not know their opposing counsel, the temptation may be to distrust the lawyer and to see all aspects of the case in a purely partisan way.

I am not advocating that lawyers abandon their ethical responsibilities to vigorously defend their client's interests. However, the bulk of communication between members of the Association and the Board of Governors indicates that lawyers may both perform their ethical obligations to their client and behave with civility toward those with whom they are in contact during the course of client representation. It seems to me and to many who talked to me and members of the Board of Governors that simply including a few pleases and thank yous could do much to improve lawyer rapport with other lawyers, professionals and lay people. Who knows? It might even result in speedy resolution of conflict, to the benefit of the lawyer and the client.

Board of Governors Elections Due

Lawyers residing in the Second, Fourth and Seventh congressional districts please note:

Members of the Board of Governors of the State Bar Association to represent those districts, for three-year terms ending in 1992, are due to be elected this year. Expiring in September, 1989 are the current Board terms of Myron J. Carlson (Second District), Edward F. Shea (Fourth District) and Julie W. Weston (Seventh District).

Article III of the Association

Bylaws provides that any active member in good standing, except a member previously elected to the Board of Governors, may be nominated for the office of Governor from the district in which he or she resides upon petitions signed by at least 20 but not more than 30 active members also residing in the district.

Nominating petitions may be obtained from the Bar office, 500 Westin Building, 2001 Sixth Avenue, Seattle, WA 98121-2599. The petitions must be filed with the Executive Director at the State Bar office by no later than 5 p.m. on Monday, May 1, 1989.

Letters to the Editor of reasonable length are invited. Such letters should be typed and signed. The Editor reserves the right to select communications or excerpts therefrom for publication, and to edit any letter as may be appropriate.

Washington's Nonclaim Nonstatute:

The Impact of Tulsa Professional Collection Services v. Pope Estate
on Probate Creditors' Claims

by Michael D. Carrico

One of the principal reasons to probate an estate has always been to strip creditors' claims off the decedent's assets. Current Chapter 11.40 RCW has served Washington attorneys and decedents' families well for decades, requiring only simple publication of a notice to creditors and a four-month waiting period before distributing estate assets. On April 19, 1988, however, all that changed: Under Tulsa Professional Collection Services, Inc. v. Joanne Pope, Executrix of the Estate of H. Everett Pope, Jr., Deceased, 485 U.S. ____, 108 Sup. Ct. 1340, 99 L.Ed.2d 565, 56 U.S. Law Week 4302 (1988), it is now clear that "due process" under the United States Constitution requires that actual notice be given to all "known or reasonably ascertainable" creditors.

The Pope Estate decision almost certainly has invalidated the Washington nonclaim statute, and personal representatives all over the state are wondering whether their estates are still subject to claims. The Bar Association has sponsored remedial legislation, which has been introduced into the current Washington Legislature. That legislation would give clear guidelines on how to comply with the Pope Estate notice requirements and would add an 18-month self-executing statute of limitations — even so, personal representatives could be faced with the need to spend a great amount of time on dealing with estate creditors. The Pope Estate decision also guarantees that potential creditors' claims will be an even more significant factor in pre-death estate planning.

The main goal of Chapter 11.40 RCW is the expeditious settlement of decedents' estates. The current statute requires only publication of notice to creditors, not actual notice. This approach has been approved several times by the Washington Supreme Court, and by the courts of many other states. See, e.g., New York Merchandise Co. v. Stout, 43 Wn.2d 825 (1953); Baker v. National Bank of Henderson, 151 Mont. 526, 445 P.2d 574 (1968); Chalaby v. Driskell, 237 Or. 245, 390 P.2d 632 (1968). Under RCW 11.40.010, any claim not made within the four-month period is barred absolutely, except for certain claims with respect to casualty or liability insurance proceeds. RCW 11.40.011.

The Pope Estate decision involved facts which are all too familiar to estate planning, probate and trust attorneys. The decedent spent his last four months in a Tulsa, Oklahoma hospital. His hospital bill presumably was substantial. Several weeks after his death, his will was admitted to probate and his wife was appointed as personal representative. Under the Oklahoma nonclaim statute she was required only to publish notice in a local newspaper. Under Section 333 of the Oklahoma Probate Code (Okla. Stat., Tit. 58 (1981)), any creditor not filing a claim against the estate within two months after the first publication was barred. Neither the hospital nor its subsidiary, Tulsa Professional Collection Services, Inc., filed a timely claim.

Nine years after Mr. Pope's death, the case reached the U.S. Supreme Court. Justice Sandra O'Connor's opinion is required reading for all estate planning, probate and trust attorneys. Relying largely on Mullane v. Central Hanover Bank and Trust Co., 339 U.S. 306 (1950), and Mennonite Board of Missions v. Adams, 462 U.S. 791 (1983), the Court held that the nonclaim statute did involve state action, that mere publication violated the "due process" clause, and that, for such a nonclaim statute to be valid, actual notice to "known and reasonably ascertainable" creditors was required. The Court's precise holding is critical and is therefore quoted at length:

As the Court noted in Mullane, "[C]hance alone brings to the attention of even a local resident an advertisement in small type inserted in the back pages of a newspaper." [Citation to Mennonite omitted.] Creditors, who have a strong interest in maintaining the integrity of their relationship with their debtors, are particularly unlikely to benefit from publication notice. As a class, creditors may not be aware of a debtor's death or of the institution of probate proceedings. Moreover, the executor or executrix will often be, as is the case here, a party with a beneficial interest in the estate. This could diminish an executor's or executrix's inclination to call attention to the potential expiration of a creditor's claim. There is thus a substantial practical need for actual notice in this setting.

At the same time, the State undeniably has a legitimate interest in the expeditious resolution of probate proceedings. . . . Providing actual notice to known or reasonably ascertainable creditors, however, is not inconsistent with the goals reflected in nonclaim statutes. Actual notice need not be inefficient or burdensome. We have repeatedly recognized that mail service is an inexpensive and efficient mechanism that is reasonably calculated to provide actual notice. [Citations omitted.] In addition, Mullane disavowed any intent to require "impracticable and extended searches . . . in the name of due process." [Citation omitted.] As the Court indicated in Mennonite, all that the executor or executrix need do is make "reasonably diligent efforts," [citation omitted] to uncover the identities of creditors. For creditors who are not "reasonably ascertainable," publication notice can suffice. Nor is everyone who may conceivably have a claim properly considered a creditor entitled to actual notice. Here, as in Mullane, it is reasonable to dispense with actual notice to those with mere "conjectural" claims. [Citation omitted.]

Justice Sandra O'Connor's opinion is required reading for all estate planning, probate and trust attorneys.

The Court also held that a self-executing statute of limitations would not involve state action, and therefore would not be subject to the same "due process" requirements. But, again, the nonclaim statute was found not to constitute such a statute of limitations.

The only significant difference between current Chapter 11.40 RCW and the Oklahoma statute struck down is the time period within which a creditor's claim must be filed: four months instead of two months. This two-month difference is probably not significant. It should be assumed that the Washington statute also is unconstitutional.

The U.S. Supreme Court did not rule on whether Pope Estate should be applied retroactively; that is, to other probate estates open on the date the decision was handed down, April 19, 1988. Because the Pope Estate holding seems to have been clearly foreshadowed by related "due process" cases (see, e.g., Brower v. Wells, 103 Wn.2d 96 (1984), invalidating the publication notice statute relating to tax sales of real estate), attorneys probably should assume that Pope Estate applies to all probate estates not closed or finally distributed as of April 19. Particularly if the creditor's claim period had not expired prior to April 19, the implication of Pope Estate is clear: Actual notice should be provided to all known creditors and the personal representative should inquire as to whether there are any other reasonably ascertainable creditors. The attorney will presumably devise an inquiry procedure for the personal representative and make sure that it is followed. If disputes arise among estate beneficiaries about whether such notice is required, the personal representative probably should have those disputes resolved in court, under RCW 11.96.070.

If the creditor's claim period expired prior to April 19, 1988, but the estate was not closed, retroactive application of the Pope Estate standards is less likely but still quite possible. Obtaining beneficiary consent or an appropriate court order certainly would be appropriate. Finally, it is unlikely that the Pope Estate standards would be applied to estates closed or finally distributed prior to April 19, given the obvious hardships that such application would entail. Such personal representatives probably can rest assured that what is closed will remain closed.

One way or the other, probate attorneys should advise all of their personal representatives about whether Pope Estate might apply to them and, if so, how to deal with it.

There is little doubt that Chapter 11.40 RCW will be amended in 1989 because of the Pope Estate case. In summer 1988, a subcommittee of the Real Property, Probate and Trust Section's "Probate Law Task Force," composed of Stanley S. Pratt of Yakima, Richard A. Klobucher of Bellevue and the author, was appointed to study the Pope Estate case and to propose remedial legislation. That legislation was approved by the Board of Governors on December 17, 1988, and it was introduced as House Bill 1173. If enacted, it would amend Chapter 11.40 as follows:

1. Many aspects of the current nonclaim statute would remain the same. For instance, it would still apply only to probate assets; publication would still be required to obtain the statutory bar; and casualty and other liability insurance coverage would still be excluded from the creditor's claim bar. The new statute would require notice to all creditors known to the personal representative at the time of appointment or those who become known to the representative during the four-month period after publication or filing of the notice to creditors. Failure to provide such notice would allow creditors to file claims after the end of that four-month period, subject to the new 18-month statute of limitations discussed below.

2. To have creditors' claims barred after the four-month period, the personal representative would have to exercise reasonable diligence to discover "reasonably ascertainable" creditors within that four-month period and would have to give actual notice to any such discovered creditors. It would establish guidelines for that "reasonably diligent" search:

The personal representative shall be deemed to have exercised reasonable diligence to ascertain such creditors upon (i) conducting, within the four-month time limitation, a reasonable review of the deceased's correspondence (including correspondence received after the date of death) and financial records (including checkbooks, bank statements, income tax returns, etc.) which are in the possession of or reasonably available to the personal representative, and (ii) having made inquiry of the deceased's heirs, devisees, and legatees.

The legislation goes on to provide three ways for the personal representative to raise a rebuttable presumption of exercising such "reasonable diligence":

(a) The personal representative may simply follow the guidelines and make an appropriate contemporaneous record of the steps taken in the search for creditors;

(b) the personal representative may go further and "evidence such review and such inquiry by filing an affidavit to that effect in the probate proceeding"; or

(c) the personal representative may request an order from the probate court declaring that a "reasonably diligent" search has been made and "that any creditors not known to the personal representative after such review and inquiry are not reasonably ascertainable." This hearing is to be conducted under Chapter 11.96 RCW.

3. Generally, creditors will have to file claims within the four-month period. If a creditor receives actual notice less than 30 days before the end of that period, the creditor may file up to 30 days after the date of service.

4. One of the most important features would be an 18-month self-executing statute of limitations, to backstop the four-month bar. Complying with the new "diligent search" guidelines might involve unnecessary expense and not be appropriate for small estates. Therefore, the legislation provides for a self-executing statute of limitations which would automatically bar all claims 18 months after the date of death, regardless of whether notice is published or actual notice is served or otherwise given. Thus, if a personal representative were not to search at all for creditors, the 18-month statute of limitations would still bar claims and allow the estate to close. Even if an "actually known" creditor were not to receive such notice and were not to file his claim within that 18-month period, that claim would be barred.

5. Finally, the rule of RCW 4.16.200 extending the time for commencement of an action against a decedent's estate to one year would be modified to conform with the rules described above, and the current six-year self-executing statute of limitations of RCW 11.04.270 (applicable when no probate is opened) would be repealed.

While the proposed amendments to the nonclaim statute would give the personal representative and probate attorney far more flexibility in dealing with creditor's claim problems, by themselves those amendments would not solve those problems. In planning the administration of a decedent's estate, it now will be necessary to determine whether substantial creditors' claims might exist; whether, how and when a search for creditors is to be conducted; and how the 18-month self-executing statute of limitations will come into play.

Pre-death planning has suddenly become more challenging. The estate planner now has to be even more careful to discuss significant potential claims with the client. If creditor's claim issues exist, the planner probably should ask the client to make the decision as to what post-death notice "comfort level" would be appropriate; that is, whether to direct the executor to make a search for creditors or simply to wait for the expiration of the new 18-month limitation period. Preliminary work on a list of major creditors probably should be done by the client. Conflict-of-interest issues regarding executors and testamentary trustees also might be examined ahead of time — for example, when a sole proprietor's principal creditor is the bank nominated to serve as his executor.

Further, preliminary analysis of creditors' claims exempt from the nonclaim statute and assets exempt from creditors' claims will have to be performed. Attention will have to be paid to nonprobate assets which pass free of claims, such as life insurance (RCW 48.18.410), interests in employee benefit plans (RCW 6.15.020(2)), and joint tenancies (Anderson v. Anderson, 80 Wn.2d 496 (1972)).

These issues certainly could have an effect on how wills and other dispositive instruments will be drawn. They could affect the estate planning of other family members; for instance, the wife of a husband with separate property creditor's claim problems might leave her estate to him via a spendthrift trust.

Finally, if an estate planning client's creditor problems were severe enough, it might even be appropriate to consider use of the federal bankruptcy system. A federal bankruptcy judge has far broader powers to assist the bankrupt client in managing assets and restructuring businesses than does a Washington superior court judge or commissioner.

The days of easy solutions to probate creditor's claim problems are gone. Under Pope Estate and current Washington statutes, an absolute bar to creditors' claims requires that all "actually known" and "reasonably ascertainable" creditors receive actual notice. While proposed legislation would clarify what a "reasonably diligent" search for those creditors entails, and would backstop the current system with a new 18-month self-executing statute of limitations, the client's or decedent's creditor problems now must be solved. No longer will they simply go away. □

The New Estate Planning Nemesis

by Robert H. Blais

The Revenue Act of 1987 created new I.R.C. § 2036(c). (All section references are to the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended.) In general, § 2036(c) seeks to negate the effect of estate freezes, i.e., those estate planning techniques which have historically allowed future appreciation in a business or other property to be passed to younger generations with nominal gift or estate tax consequences. If a growth interest in property is transferred, while a fixed or frozen interest in the property is retained, § 2036(c) will generally cause the growth interest to be included in the taxpayer's estate under § 2036(a). The essential provision of the new statute is found in § 2036(c)(1) which provides:

IN GENERAL. — For purposes of subsection (a) [relating to the general estate tax inclusion rule under § 2036], if—

(A) any person holds a substantial interest in an enterprise, and

(B) such person in effect transfers after December 17, 1987, property having a disproportionately large share of the potential appreciation in such person's interest in the enterprise while retaining an interest in the income of, or rights in, the enterprise, then the retention of the retained interest shall be considered to be a retention of the enjoyment of the transferred property [thus requiring inclusion of the transferred property in the decedent/transferor's estate for federal estate tax purposes under § 2036(a)].

Section 2036(c) is having an enormous impact on estate planning. Most commentators agree that its reach will extend well beyond traditional freezing strategies. Consequently, the application of § 2036(c) will have to be considered in all intra-family transactions, including but not limited to joint purchases, sales of remainder interests, private annuities, irrevocable life insurance trusts, split-dollar life insurance agreements, sales, leases, loans, buy/sell agreements, options, grantor-retained income or annuity trusts, employment and consulting agreements, and various corporate and partnership arrangements. Well-informed estate planners will be careful to avoid the reach of § 2036(c). For the ill-informed, a rude awakening is in store.

The Basic Test For Estate Tax Inclusion

There are several tests, rules and adjustments contained in § 2036(c) which cannot be discussed in detail here because of space limitations. In general, however, the application of § 2036(c) appears to be dependent upon the satisfaction of the following four conditions, assuming one of the exceptions (discussed below) does not apply:

- (i) A person (hereinafter "the decedent/transferor") or his or her family members must own (directly or indirectly) a 10% or more interest in a business or other property which may produce income or gain;
- (ii) The decedent/transferor must die after December 31, 1987, having transferred an interest in such business or other property after December 17, 1987 (hereinafter "the appreciation property");
- (iii) An effect of the transfer, regardless of the means or device employed, is that after the transfer, the decedent/transferor's interest in the potential appreciation in the business or other property is lower, on a proportionate basis, than his or her retained share in the income of, or rights in, the business or other property (sometimes "the retained interest"); and
- (iv) At the time of death, the decedent/transferor must continue to own all or part of the retained interest.

Condition (iii) listed above is the most troublesome. Unless an exception, an offset or an adjustment applies, the conservative planner should generally assume that § 2036(c) will apply to any transaction where a person transfers an interest in property to another (typically a family member), while retaining some direct or indirect interest in the "income of or rights in" such property. If § 2036(c) applies, then the transferred appreciation property will be brought back into the decedent/transferor's gross estate at the property's date of death value.

Safe Harbors; GRITS

The Technical and Miscellaneous

Revenue Act of 1988 ("TAMRA") created several exceptions, or "safe harbors," to § 2036(c). Section 2036(c)(7) exempts certain retained interests and transactions from application of § 2036(c). The safe harbors are intended to provide taxpayers with some assurance that simple, non-abusive transactions will not fall prey to § 2036(c). These safe harbors are described below.

A. Qualified debt. Section 2036(c)(7)(A)(i) provides that § 2036(c) will not apply solely by reason of the fact that the decedent/transferor has retained "qualified debt." Qualified debt is defined in § 2036(c)(7)(C) and generally means "pure" debt. The requirements of qualified debt are relatively easy to satisfy. Accordingly, arm's length, intra-family loans or sales of assets, where the decedent/transferor retains indebtedness meeting the requirements of qualified debt, will not cause § 2036(c) to apply.

B. Qualified startup debt. Qualified debt also includes "qualified startup debt." The qualified startup debt safe harbor is defined in § 2036(c)(7)(D)(ii). In some respects, the requirements of qualified startup debt are less stringent than those for qualified debt. This safe harbor is designed to allow for cash to be loaned to family members involved in the active conduct of a trade or business.

C. Sales, leases and provision of services. Section 2036(c)(7)(A)(ii) provides, "[E]xcept as provided in regulations, the existence of an agreement for the sale or lease of goods or other property to be used in the enterprise or the providing of services" shall not cause § 2036(c) to apply so long as the agreement is an arm's length agreement for fair market value, and does not otherwise involve any change in interests in the enterprise.

Section 2036(c)(7)(B) places two additional limitations on this safe harbor. In the case of an agreement providing for compensation for services performed by the decedent/transferor after the § 2036(c)(1)(B) transfer, the agreement cannot be for a period greater than three years after the date of the transfer. In this regard, the term of any agreement includes any period for which the agreement may be extended at the option of the decedent/transferor. Furthermore, the amount payable to the decedent/transferor under the agreement referred to in § 2036(c)(7)(A)(ii) cannot be determined (in whole or in part) by reference to gross receipts, income, profits or similar items of the enterprise.

D. Buy/sell agreements. The final safe harbor deals with buy/sell agreements and options. Section 2036(c)(7)(A)(iii) provides, "an option or other agreement to buy or sell property at the fair market value of such property as of the time the option is (or the rights under the agreement are) exercised" shall not trigger § 2036(c). Queries: Will pre-December 18, 1987 buy/sell agreements be grandfathered if they fall outside this safe harbor? Will the effective date of the transfer be the date the buy/sell agreement or option agreement is executed or the date options or rights are exercised? In any event, the "pricing" provisions in buy/sell agreements, options and similar agreements will have to be reviewed to make certain they comply with this "fair market value at date of exercise" safe harbor. Otherwise, § 2036(c) may create adverse estate tax consequences.

E. Grantor-retained income trusts. TAMRA creates a special exception for grantor-retained income trusts ("GRITs"). A GRIT is a freezing device whereby a grantor establishes a trust, retains an income interest for a term of years and reports a gift for the value of the remainder interest in the year the trust is established. In the pre-§ 2036(c) era, if the grantor survived the trust term, the trust principal passed to the next generation with no additional transfer tax consequences. However, if the grantor dies during the term of the GRIT, the trust property will be included in the grantor's estate. Section 2036(c)(6)(A) provides:

For purposes of this subsection [§ 2036(c)], any retention of a qualified trust income interest shall be disregarded and the property with respect to which such interest exists shall be treated as held by the transferor while such income interest continues.

A "qualified trust income interest" ("QTII") is defined in § 2036(c)(6)(B) to mean:

[a]ny right to receive amounts determined solely by reference to the income from property held in trust if—

- (i) such right is for a period not exceeding 10 years,
- (ii) the person holding such right transferred the property to the trust, and
- (iii) such person is not a trustee of such trust.

As a result of § 2036(c)(6), GRITs "still work" if they are structured properly. Should the decedent/transferor survive the GRIT term, there should be no "deemed gift" problem (discussed below) and § 2036(c) should not apply.

It would appear a GRIT funded with cash need not meet the requirements of § 2036(c)(6) because cash should not be considered an enterprise under § 2036(c).

Well-informed estate planners will be careful to avoid the reach of 2036(c). For the ill-informed, a rude awakening is in store.

In addition, a GRIT funded with publicly-traded securities of an entity in which the decedent/transferor and his or her family do not hold a 10% or greater interest should be outside the scope of § 2036(c) because of the substantial interest requirement under § 2036(c)(1)(A).

The Consideration Offset

Generally, § 2036(a) does not apply to a bona fide sale for adequate and full consideration in money or money's worth. Under § 2036(c)(2)(A), however, it is provided that the bona fide sale exception of § 2036(a) will not apply to a transfer (sale) described in § 2036(c)(1) (quoted above) to a member of the decedent/transferor's family.

TAMRA introduces a new "consideration offset" where a member of the decedent/transferor's family provides consideration for an interest in the enterprise. In a sense, this consideration offset, if applicable, provides an additional safe harbor. If such consideration consists of "clean money," i.e., the consideration was never received or acquired from the decedent/transferor for less than full and adequate consideration, then a fractional share of the family member's interest in the enterprise will be excluded from the decedent/transferor's gross estate.

The following example is illustrative of how this consideration offset should work: Assume the decedent/transferor owns all the outstanding common stock (100 shares) and preferred stock (100 shares) of a corporation. The common shares are worth $1,000,000 and the preferred $1,000,000. The decedent/transferor sells the common shares to his or her daughter for $1,000,000. The daughter pays for the shares with "clean money." (Query: How is this to be proved?) On the decedent/transferor's death, the preferred stock is included in his or her estate under § 2033. However, none of the common shares (assume then worth $2,000,000) should be included in his or her estate. This is because the "applicable fraction" determining the amount of the common stock excluded from the decedent/transferor's estate should be 1 ($1,000,000 divided by $1,000,000). The numerator of the applicable fraction is $1,000,000, the consideration paid by the daughter for her interest in the corporation. The denominator of the applicable fraction should be $1,000,000 as well because that is the value of the portion of the enterprise which would (but for § 2036(c)(2)(B)(i)) have been included in the decedent/transferor's gross estate by reason of § 2036(c) (not § 2033) immediately after the transfer described in § 2036(c)(1), i.e., immediately after the sale of the common stock to the daughter.

This example and the meaning of the clean money consideration offset are put into question by a passage and an example contained in the 1988 Conference Report. However, the 1988 Conference Report seems at odds with the language of § 2036(c)(2)(B).

Deemed Gift Rule

As initially enacted, § 2036(c)(4) contained a "3-year rule" which basically required that the appreciation property be included in the decedent/transferor's estate if he or she transferred the retained interest within three years of death. TAMRA eliminated the three-year rule and replaced it with what is known as the "deemed gift rule." Section 2036(c)(4) now provides that the decedent/transferor will be treated as having made a taxable gift of the appreciation property if, during his or her lifetime, the decedent/transferor transfers all or any portion of his or her retained interest or the person to whom the appreciation property was transferred transfers all or any portion of the appreciation property to a person who is not a member of the decedent/transferor's family.

Accordingly, a subsequent transfer of the retained interest or the appreciation property will generally result in the decedent/transferor's being deemed to have made a gift to the person who initially received the appreciation property. Generally, the amount of the gift will be equal to the amount of the appreciation which the appreciation property experiences between the date of the initial § 2036(c) transfer and the date of the deemed gift.

If a deemed gift transfer occurs, then § 2036(c)(4)(B) provides that neither § 2036(c)(1) nor § 2035(d)(2) shall thereafter require inclusion of the appreciation property in the decedent/transferrer's gross estate.

Correction Period

Under the effective-date provisions of TAMRA, there is a "correction period" (between December 17, 1987 and December 31, 1989, inclusive), during which time a transaction can be corrected so that it is not subject to § 2036(c). Section 3031(h)(4) of TAMRA provides:

If section 2036(c)(1) of the 1986 Code would (but for this paragraph) apply to any interest arising from a transaction entered into during the period beginning after December 17, 1987, and ending before January 1, 1990, such section shall not apply to such interest if—

(A) during such period, such actions are taken as are necessary to have such section 2036(c)(1) not apply to such transaction (and any such interest), or

(B) the original transferor and his spouse on January 1, 1990 (or, if earlier, the date of the original transferor's death), does not hold any interest in the enterprise involved.

The 1988 Conference Report discusses the correction period in connection with the "safe harbors" discussed above. This might lead one to conclude that corrections can be made only so as to fit a transaction within a safe harbor. However, such a limitation does not appear present in § 3031(h)(4).

Conclusion

Under the current state of the law, it is difficult to determine what types of transactions will be covered by § 2036(c), other than those protected by the exceptions discussed above. One should expect the Service to exploit § 2036(c) and apply it to transactions not typically considered to be estate freezes. The Service will likely be given even broader authority to swing its § 2036(c) sword. TAMRA added § 2036(c)(8), which provides:

such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this subsection, including such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to prevent avoidance of the purposes of this subsection through distributions or otherwise.

In any event, the planner must be very careful in structuring family transactions until guidance is provided with respect to those transactions which will not be subject to § 2036(c). Otherwise, § 2036(c) may raise its ugly head to the chagrin of the client of the client's heirs. □

Probate Law Revision

by James K. Treadwell

The Washington law pertaining to wills, trusts and the administration of estates of deceased or incompetent persons is unique among the 50 jurisdictions in our national judicial system. Historically, the combination of our state's community property and non-intervention administration systems has distinguished its succession law from that of the other states. Yet what so fundamentally sets Washington's succession law apart is its quality, and this quality is a direct function of the continued attention that the members of the State Bar have paid to this area of the law.

The last two decades have witnessed three major revisions to RCW Title 11 and the other statutes that bear upon the state's succession law. In 1967, a major overhaul of Title 11 was made in response to the passage of a statewide initiative several years before providing for joint tenancy with right of survivorship passage of property. In 1974, another major revision was enacted. Finally, the Trust Act of 1984 substantially modernized our laws relating to fiduciary powers, the judicial and nonjudicial resolution of disputes and a host of other substantive and procedural aspects of trusts and estates.

The job of modernizing and improving a body of law is never-ending. Succession law evolves through changes in attitudes, changes in tax policies and through the process of judicial interpretation. Early in 1988, the WSBA Real Property, Probate and Trust Section expanded its standing probate legislative committee into an organization denominated the Probate Law Task Force. The Task Force is now in the midst of what will likely prove to be a three-year project, the desired result of which is a comprehensive set of revisions to the many sections of RCW Title 11 not covered by the 1984 Trust Act and to other sections of the RCW that effect matters of succession.

The Task Force is presently comprised of what, in effect, is a steering committee together with a growing number of subcommittees devoted to specific subject matter areas. Involvement in the project will not be limited to private practitioners. For example, the subcommittee that is being formed to deal with guardianship issues involves Commissioner Stephen Gaddis and Assistant Attorney General Steve Milam amongst a distinguished group of guardianship specialists. It is anticipated that a blue-ribbon advisory panel of senior estate and probate practitioners, academicians and jurists will be formed this spring. This panel will be called upon to periodically review and comment upon the Task Force's work in progress.

The steering committee is presently comprised of 16 members, all of whom have put forth significant effort to date and can be expected to devote considerable time to the project over the next several years. They deserve mention.

Each of the three law schools within the state is well-represented on the Task Force. Professor Thomas R. Andrews, who teaches community property along with trusts and estates at the University of Washington School of Law, sits on the steering committee. Tom's activities over the last several years have included speaking, writing and legislating in the area of quasi-community property. Professor Jan Ellen Rein who instructs in the area of trusts and estates at the Gonzaga University School of Law likewise sits on the steering committee. Jan has recently co-authored West Publishing Company's newest hornbook in the estates and trusts area. The third academician on the steering committee is Professor Mark Reutlinger of the University of Puget Sound School of Law. Mark is the co-author of the widely used Washington Law of Wills and Intestate Succession.

The banking community is also well-represented on the Task Force. Roger F. Donahoe, an attorney with Rainier National Bank's trust department and Ivan K. Landreth, Jr., an attorney with Seattle First National Bank's trust department, sit on the steering committee. The balance of the committee's membership is comprised of attorneys in private practice. For logistical reasons these attorneys all practice in either Seattle or Spokane. The much-needed participation of attorneys in other communities within the state is being accomplished at the subcommittee level. Private practitioners on the steering committee include Robert P. Beschell and William D. Eden of Spokane and Robert H. Blais, Michael D. Carrico, Bruce P. Flynn, Alan H. Kane, Richard A. Klobucher, Douglas C. Lawrence, Patricia J. Parks and Evan O. Thomas, III of Seattle.

1988 has been an organizational year for the Task Force. Much of the group's work to date has been in the determination of the scope of the project and in the formulation of an approach to the processing of raw ideas into an integrated legislative package. A preliminary agenda of proposed topics is being developed and will be completed within the next few months.

The Task Force will be going public with its agenda in the spring edition of the Real Property, Probate and Trust Section Newsletter. This will be followed by a presentation and workshop session at the forthcoming sectional midyear meeting which will be held in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho on May 5, 6 and 7. The workshop, which will be held on Sunday, May 7, will be designed specifically for the purpose of facilitating audience participation.

The Uniform Probate Code was approved by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws and by the American Bar Association in 1969. Since then, 11 states have enacted the UPC. The UPC is now in its seventh edition. It is the product of the ongoing effort of a number of the nation's leading practitioners, academicians and jurists. Two Washington attorneys have played prominent roles in the evolution of the UPC: The Honorable Charles Horowitz served as co-chairman of the National Conference's Special Committee on the UPC, and Malcolm Moore serves as the ABA Representative to the Joint Editorial Board for the UPC.

In spite of the influence of these two prominent Washingtonians, our state has not adopted the UPC. As a matter of fact, the 1974 legislative effort was spiced by a rather heated controversy involving a proposal that the UPC be adopted as this state's succession law. We understand that the widely held preference for Washington's non intervention system over the UPC's simplified administration alternative was a strong influence in the rejection of the UPC proposal at that time.

It is doubtful that the Task Force would seriously consider a wholesale enactment of the UPC. However, virtually every topic that has been considered for inclusion on the preliminary agenda is the subject of specific treatment in the UPC. The National Conference is in the process of overhauling a number of UPC sections. We are keeping close contact with this effort, and it can be anticipated that the Task Force's work product will in many instances reflect a UPC influence.

A discussion of the agenda items thus far developed is beyond the scope of this article. Suffice it to say, for the moment, that the agenda covers a wide array of topics from Abatement to the Dead Man's Statute to Pretermitted Heirs and through Will Substitutes.

It would be nice to think that time would stand still for the next three years so as to enable us to present all ensuing succession law legislation in one neat package. Of course, that simply will not happen. As is discussed in Michael D. Carrico's companion article, the Task Force has proposed legislation in the nature of an immediate response to the U.S. Supreme Court's 1988 decision in Tulsa Professional Collection Services, Inc. v. Joanne Pope, Executrix Of The Estate Of H. Everett Pope, Jr. Deceased, 485 U.S._____, 56 U.S.L.W. 4302 (1988), in which a nonclaim statute quite similar to Washington's was determined to violate the "due process" clause of the fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The Task Force is also considering a legislative response to the Washington State Supreme Court's decision in The Estate of O'Brien, 109 Wn.2d 913 (1988). In this case, our Supreme Court ruled that under certain circumstances a real estate deed (not effectively constituting an inter vivos gift) could operate as a testamentary instrument even though not meeting the formal requirements of a will. It is anticipated that this legislation will be presented at the 1990 legislative session.

We encourage all members of the Bar to involve themselves in the Task Force's undertaking. Ideas for agenda items would be appreciated, not to mention subcommittee participation. Please forward any comments or inquiries in this regard to James K. Treadwell, 1201 Third Avenue, Suite 2900, Seattle, WA 98101-3028. □

Copyrights— A Pitfall in Estate Planning

by Rex B. Stratton

Estate planning on occasion may entail the disposition of intellectual property rights, which include patents, trademarks and copyrights. In respect to the latter, a recent Federal District Court decision strictly applied the Copyright Act of 1976 frustrating the decedent's testamentary desire. In Saroyan v. William Saroyan Foundation, _____ F. Supp. _____, 5 USPQ 2d. 1532 (S.D. N.Y. 1987), Judge MacMahon, applying Section 304(a) of the Copyright Act, 17 U.S.C. § 304(a), held that the children of William Saroyan had the exclusive right to the copyright renewals of his work, The Cave Dwellers.

The 1976 Act

Copyright protection subsists under federal law in original works of authorship fixed in any tangible medium of expression and includes the following general categories (17 U.S.C. § 102(a)):

1. Literary works;
2. Musical works, including any accompanying words;
3. Dramatic works, including any accompanying music;
4. Pantomimes and choreographic works;
5. Pictorial, graphic, and sculptural works;
6. Motion pictures and other audio visual works; and
7. Sound recordings.

Under the 1976 Act, which became effective January 1, 1978, any copyright on or after that date endures for the life of the author plus 50 years. (A different rule, which grants a minimum term of 75 years from the date of publication, applies to anonymous, pseudonymous and works made for hire.) The duration of a copyright under the new act is significantly longer than existed under the 1909 Copyright Act.

William Saroyan

Transition

To effect the transition between the 1909 and 1976 laws, Section 304 of the 1976 Copyright Act provides that any registered copyright which existed on January 1, 1978 would endure for 28 years from the date the copyright was originally secured (the duration allowed under the 1909 Copyright Act). The 1909 Act, however, provided for a renewal term of 28 years (for a total duration of 56 years). Section 304(a) continues and provides for the renewal and extension of the pre-January 1, 1978 copyright for a further term of 47 years when an application for renewal and extension is registered with the Copyright Office one year prior to the expiration of the original copyright term. The pitfall is: The 1976 Act specifically sets forth the persons who are entitled to renew and extend the term of a copyright obtained under the 1909 Copyright Act.

published works was left to the William Saroyan Foundation. In 1986, the Saroyan children renewed the copyright to The Cave Dwellers in their names. The Foundation disputed the children's claim to the renewal rights and directed both the authorized publisher and the play's licensing agent to continue to remit royalties to the Foundation. The children sued.

Although the court found that the relationship between the father and his children was stormy, even estranged, the 1976 Copyright Act was express:

There is nothing in the plain language and structure of § 304(a) to indicate any basis for denying renewal rights to an author's surviving children. The Foundation's novel grounds for attacking plaintiffs' renewal rights run afoul of the uniform treatment of § 304(a)'s clauses as a nondiscretionary order of renewal rights.

These authorities require the conclusion that the bequest of renewal rights to the Foundation was without effect because the renewal rights never became part of the estate. They also render immaterial allegations by defendant of a stormy relationship between plaintiffs and their father. This result is fortified by court decisions holding that widows who remarry and illegitimate children meet the statutory definition, thereby precluding executors' renewal rights. 5 USPQ 2d at 1534 (citations deleted).

Control

Estate planners need to be aware that state laws do not control most aspects of copyright ownership. By Congressional mandate, Section 301 of the Copyright Act of 1976, preempts after January 1, 1978, virtually all other laws governing copyrights. Thus, the creator of a copyrighted work registered before January 1, 1978 who desires to transfer his or her interests to anyone outside of the persons identified in 17 U.S.C. § 304(a), an assignment of the renewal right must be obtained from each member of the protected class. Without such an assignment, the renewal rights arising by statute may be exercised by a member of the Section 304(a) class, and the gift of the full interest in the copyright will fail.

Fortunately, there is light at the end of the tunnel. Beginning in the year 2006 the pitfall created by the transition rules of 17 U.S.C. § 304(a) will lapse, as all pre-1978 copyrights will have either expired or been renewed. Until that date, however, added care is required in the drafting of any plan involving copyrights registered before January 1, 1978, if the transfer of all rights in a copyright is to be consummated and an infeasible transfer created. □

we specialize in valuing closely held businesses

by Lindsay Thompson

Olympia, Washington, January 13-14, 1989

Present: President Bracelin and the Governors of the Association. Also Present: C.C. Bridgewater and Pat Sutherland (Prosecutors' Assn.); Alece Cox (Washington Women Lawyers); Ronald Cox (SKCBA Trustees); Judge Robert Doran (Superior Court Judges' Assn.); Frank Edmondson (Government Lawyers); Dan Gottlieb (SKCBA Young Lawyers); Ed Holm (Legal Foundation of Washington); John McKay (WSBA Young Lawyers); John J. Michalik (WSBA Executive Director); Judge Joel Rindal (Magistrates' Assn.); Lindsay Thompson (Bar News Editor); Gregg Tinker (WSTLA); and Robert Welden (WSBA General Counsel).

Operations: Executive Director John Michalik and Governor Julie Weston, chair of the Board's Budget and Audit Committee, went over the more or less final figures for the Association's 1987-1988 budget. While most of the budget came in as predicted, or anticipated overruns in one area were offset by savings in others, three areas were singled out for particular scrutiny: WSBA committee expenses, conference and meeting costs, and the Bar convention, each of which came out about 130% of budget.

Michalik said convention attendance has clearly leveled off, causing what used to be a small, acceptable deficit to become a larger and less agreeable one. He told the Governors there would have to be a rethinking of the program and pricing of the convention to recover more costs in the future. For starters, he said he's cut the number of CLE speakers who'll get their convention registration fee waived for doing CLEs.

In 1988 the number had reached 96; in 1989 it will be 48.

Weston said committees of the Association are being watched more closely and their chairs are being contacted about keeping within budget, and that cost-cutting measures for Board meetings are already in effect.

Governor Ron Gould stressed that "in seeking to control committee costs, we don't want to discourage committees from being active. We're not a legislature with the power to tax. We have to live within our means."

Remembering Wayne Wilson: On a motion by Governor Steve DeForest, the Governors approved a resolution expressing regret at the death of Wayne Wilson, Public Affairs Director of the Association, on January 10, 1989. A fuller appreciation of Wilson's 15 years with the Association will appear in next month's Bar News.

Electing a new president: Several months ago the Board decided to advance the timetable for electing the next president of the Association to give that person more time to get up to speed before taking office in September. Governors Steve DeForest, Ed Shea and Paul Stritmatter, the Presidential Search Committee, recommended — and the Board unanimously elected — Chehalis lawyer and former WSBA Governor James Vander Stoep to the presidency for 1988-1989.

At least it won't be a computer-generated phone call: The Governors spent some time fine-tuning a poll of membership developed by Governors Mike Carlson, Ron Gould and Jeff Tolman. The survey will query WSBA members' views on insurance, member services, where the Bar convention

Washington Evidence Law and Practice, 3d

by Karl B. Tegland, Volumes 5, 5A, 5B of West's® Washington Practice Series

Washington Evidence Law and Practice, 3d reflects the complete law of evidence in Washington. Tegland incorporates all rules, statutes, and every reported case interpreting the Evidence Rules since their adoption in 1979. Where an issue has not been addressed in Washington, he cites cases from other jurisdictions.

This new edition:

- is organized according to the Washington Evidence Rules
- is extensively cross-referenced to McCormick's Evidence, Graham's Handbook of Federal Evidence, Wright and Graham's Federal Practice and Procedure: Evidence and other volumes in West's Washington Practice Series
- includes citations to law review articles with in-depth discussion of the rules
- is prepared by Washington's leading expert in evidence law.

New topics include: use of hypnosis, DNA testing, uses for statistical evidence, areas of expert testimony such as stress syndrome, implied assertions, statements by co-conspirators, admissions in pleadings, and statements by abused children.

You'll find the answers to such questions as:

- Q: What is the interplay between the right to confrontation and the hearsay rule and how do each apply in Washington courts?
- Q: What are the recent developments in the area of Burden of Proof?
- Q: When should an expert be allowed to testify that eyewitness identification can be unreliable?

should be held, what to do about publications, and the gap between committee seats and the number of people who want to serve on them. It's expected to be out in a month or so.

Novack Report called a medical curiosity: Pungently expressing the view that it was nothing but lawyer-bashing, the Governors spent a good while bashing the conclusions of the Novack Commission on Legal Fees. The Commission was created in 1987 in response to the tort reform controversy, and its report will appear for comment in the Supreme Court's Advance Sheets.

The Commission found no evidence of patterns of abuse in setting attorney fees, in tort litigation or any other transaction. They reaffirmed the value of contingent fees. They found that when there's a problem about fees, it's usually because of poor communication between lawyers and clients. However, they went on to make a number of important recommendations, including:

- amending RPC 1.5(a) to clarify how a reasonable fee will be evaluated;
- requiring that virtually all clients be given a "Statement of the Lawyer-Client Relationship and Information As To Fees And Costs" when undertaking a project;
- amending RPC 1.5(c) to require that contingent fees be calculated on net recovery after deduction of expenses, not on gross recovery, as well as changing the calculation of contingent fees in structured settlements;
- adding a new RPC 1.5(j) making fee arbitration mandatory when the client wants one.

Governor Paul Stritmatter, an advisor to the Commission, said that the report was a political document, proposing solutions to problems that don't exist.

Governor Ed Shea was even more direct. "This is a cure in search of an illness," he said. "It's a case of powerful people in powerful positions who act on an anecdote and think they know the whole story. It is a push by a couple of politicians to regulate the Bar," Shea continued, "to put themselves between us and our clients. Historically, it's been lawyers who've protected clients from the Legislature. These people think it's the other way around."

Governor Ron Gould was concerned that "the tone of the report is somewhat anti-lawyer. I don't see anything justifying treating lawyers like used car salesmen." He felt that the report displayed an ignorance of the wide variety of attorney fee arrangements now in use and their benefits to clients.

Governor Don Curran said the fee arbitration requirements will encourage disputes with clients, and found the report "demeaning. It's incumbent upon us to take a position on this," he told the Board. "My constituents have criticized the Board for being wimpish in the past on issues of crucial interest to lawyers."

Governor Julie Weston said the report "appears to have been written by academics and judges," not practicing lawyers, and pressed for immediate action on the report. "We were elected to lead."

Several other Governors thought a member of the Commission ought to be invited to appear, and that the views of WSBA members should be sought before a position was taken. That view prevailed on a 6-4 vote, and the matter will be taken up in February. In the meantime, input from members is urgently requested by the Governors.

SUCCESSFUL APPELLATE PRACTICE Begins in the Trial Court

Every trial lawyer knows that appellate success depends upon the record made in the trial court. Not all trial lawyers, however, know how to make a winning record.

The pitfalls facing trial counsel are all too well documented. Too often, meritorious appeals are lost due to procedural errors committed at the trial level. The simple act of stating the issue before the Court can be critical to the outcome of an appeal. As a Supreme Court Justice observed, "to state the question often is to decide it. And it may do this by failure to reveal fully what is at stake." Yakus v. United States, 321 U.S. 414, 482 (1944).

Similarly, at the appellate level, procedural traps for the unwary practitioner abound. For example: "there must be specific assignments of error before we will go behind the trial court's findings." Dave v. Nastos, 39 Wn. App. 590, 595, 694 P.2d 686 (1985).

With our years of appellate experience, we can help you through every stage of the appeal process. James E. Lobsenz and John W. Wolfe are available for referral, consultation or association in state and federal appeals, as well as in trial court matters leading to appeal.

JAMES E. LOBSENZ, former Clerk to Associate Justice Mathew O. Tobriner, California Supreme Court, and Chief Justice Vincent L. McKusick, Supreme Judicial Court of Maine; author of numerous law review articles; successful appeals include In re Addleman, State v. Ryan (amicus), State v. Pam, State v. Sargent, Lang v. Lang. Federal appeals include Watkins v. United States.

Legislative report: Don Ericson, chair of the Legislative Committee, and WSBA Legislative Liaison John Fattorini brought up a package of proposals from the Washington Association of Prosecuting Attorneys and proposed revisions of the Trademark Act.

The criminal legislation would tighten the availability of post-conviction bail, limit the grounds and time for filing personal restraint petitions, and change the ways mental defenses can be used. Washington Association of Criminal Defense Counsel Richard Hansen and Prosecutors' Association representative Mike Redman debated the merits of the proposals, after which the Board voted to take no position on them. Both sides have lobbies in Olympia and will slug it out on their own.

After some discussion of an attorney's fee clause, the Board voted to sponsor the proposed revisions of the Trademark Act and referred a proposal to amend the debt collection statutes to the Legislative Committee.

Wrap-up in Olympia: In other action, the Board:

- approved amendments to the bylaws of the Corporation, Business & Banking Law Section;
- chose to send the Association's delegation to the ABA midyear meeting without instructions on how to vote;
- met briefly with Governor Booth Gardner;
- received a report from the Legal Aid Committee on the need for civil legal services for the poor; and
- voted a grant of $5,000 for Seattle lawyer Lauren Marshall's play, "Whadda 'Bout My Legal Rights?" in aid of its coming tour of Washington high schools.

Next meeting: February 10-11, 1989 in Tacoma.

ABA Seeking Pro Bono Award Nominees

Nominations are open for the 1989 Pro Bono Publico Awards, which were created in 1984 to recognize the public service contributions of thousands of lawyers across the nation. Eligibility is restricted to lawyers who do not make their living delivering legal services to poor persons, but who either directly provide such services on a volunteer basis, or create or organize systematic improvements that increase access to justice for poor persons. Nominations will be accepted until March 1, 1989. Both individual lawyers and law firms may be nominated. Questions or nominations should be addressed to Dorothy Jackson, Staff Assistant, ABA Standing Committee on Lawyers' Public Service Responsibility, 750 N. Lake Shore Dr., Chicago, IL 60611, (312) 988-5766, ABA/net id: ABA413.

Lawyer as Photographer: Centennial Courthouse

by R. Stanley Morse

The Centennial Courthouse photography project has roots that go back beyond six years ago when I first picked up a camera and tried to take serious pictures. I was living and practicing law in Chelan, and I had developed "attorney stress syndrome." I was unhappy with the progress of my creative side, sometimes overwhelmed by the immensity of my clients' problems, not as socially active as I would have liked, and working too many hours.

I took a hard look at who and what I was and tried to discover what would make me happier. I did what many other attorneys had done: I "ran away" from the practice.

I began to write fiction and magazine articles. I purchased a 35mm camera so I'd have convenient photographs for editors to use, and I began to study photographic basics in books like Ansel Adams's The Camera. I closed my law practice for a year and a half, moved to Seattle for a more cosmopolitan lifestyle, and became proficient at both photography and writing.

The problem was, I wasn't making much money.

I wonder how many attorneys stay with, or return to, a law practice because of the income, rather than because they enjoy it. Law, I think many will agree, is a tough way to make a living. When I went back to the practice in the summer of 1984, I started to analyze the stress-induced burn-out I had been through. Here are some of my observations:

Most lawyers are creative, intelligent people. A law practice demands both qualities, but seldom provides immediate or significant emotional rewards. Clients rarely give quick or positive feedback, particularly to young attorneys. It may take years to "win" a big case, and then victory is seldom sharp-edged or complete. Most of the time we can't even talk about it.

In comparison: artists' shows are critiqued by the press and viewed by the public; politicians make headlines when they are elected or pass a new law; shipwrights have their creations christened by a bottle of champagne in front of a crowd. Attorneys, on the other hand, walk out of a courtroom, away from a settlement conference, or out of a client meeting with rarely a word of appreciation, and never (we hope) a public accolade. The most we can usually expect is that the client's check will clear the bank! Our daily practice is often a grinding tedium, and developing a vision of the entirety we are creating is sometimes impossible and never certain. So, despite the fact that law provides many avenues for the creative mind, it rarely rewards the ego.

We are always fighting. Even if the battles are intellectual, we are combatants, opposing colleagues who are equally intelligent or creative — or are just plain mean and hard to deal with. Sometimes, the greatest opponent turns out to be our client, because (s)he is less than honest, is argumentative or is distrustful.

And there is always that enemy within — the critical eye that observes and records every mistake and miscalculation. A creative mind is just that because its owner constantly looks in the mirror to critique and reworks his way of perceiving the world. For an attorney, this often results in a hard reflection of even the slightest imperfection — we are all imperfect to some degree in what we do. Unlike the sculptor or painter who discards sketches and workups upon achieving the final work, we attorneys are forced to accept the quick-cast work of our pressure cooker environment; the client cannot afford to pay for multiple efforts, and the chance to redo something (say, a trial or a deposition) rarely exists. This conflict within ourselves — between the need for perfection and the need for speed — is often the most likely cause of attorney stress syndrome.

Which brings me to my point. To survive and thrive in my law practice I've split off a portion of my creativity and focused it on what I most enjoy: photography, singing, writing, and whatever else takes my fancy. A segment of my creative energy is still devoted to the law, but I recognize it to be only a part — I do not allow the practice to engulf me.

I pay a price. Seldom do I "work" a fifty- or sixty-hour week. As a result, I probably make less money than I might. But I believe that the quality of my legal work has improved, and that has further reduced the imperfection-stress factor. Plus, when I do need to invest extra hours to respond to a motion or prepare for a trial, I have the time. I'm not even fully convinced I make less money. I've streamlined my practice. I take only those cases that meet three criteria: interesting, financially rewarding and brought to me by a sane client. The fewer hours I bill are more likely to deliver a satisfying financial return. I can afford time to help the client understand my role in the resolution of his or her problem — clients who know what to expect tend to be pleasurable to deal with.

So, on the whole, my law practice is a satisfying, financially rewarding part of my life. It supports my other creative activities — like "Centennial Courthouse" — which yield frequent and direct emotional rewards and give me the feeling of contributing something more to The Cause than being just another functionary. This symbiotic approach has improved my attitude towards my law practice and towards life. Law may be the "root" which anchors me in place, but I've encouraged other "organisms" — like photography — to provide emotional nourishment. □

Lawyers' Assistance Program First-Year Report: 1987-1988

LAP's doors opened for service in August 1987. During its first year of operation, 144 lawyers and judges received assistance from the program. (More than one percent of all Washington lawyers, an accomplishment that no other similar program has produced by first year's end.) Such success is due to a number of factors. Probably the most important determinants are first, Supreme Court rules which guarantee unprecendented confidentiality protections and second, an outstanding group of volunteers who serve as peer counselors and as steering and advisory group members.

Fifty-eight percent of our clients are lawyers who have self-referred. They tend to be in the beginning stages of impairment. Early identification of the need has usually resulted in successful treatment. Many clients reported that they would not have sought any treatment but for the fact that LAP's confidential services would never lead to involvement with the discipline authority unless the client provided expressed consent. The availability of peer counselors and other effective resources who work well with lawyers also has attracted self-referrals. Many lawyers have come in after reading this monthly Bar News column. The articles helped convince them that LAP services are confidential, readily available, and germane to their particular form of distress.

Services also have been delivered to lawyers referred by third parties, including the WSBA Legal Department. If untreated, these lawyers might have continued to commit malpractice or perform disservices to their clients, their family members, their colleagues, the courts, and themselves. This type of client only enters treatment if (s)he consents to treatment recommendations.

Peer-counselor-training and ongoing supervision occurs on a regular basis throughout the state. Peer counselor groups already exist in the Seattle/Tacoma area, Bellingham, Olympia, Wenatchee, Spokane, and Pasco. The program has recruited 70 volunteer lawyers, who have received training at 38 different events. Their support of LAP has provided an additional medium through which other lawyers learn about LAP.

Finally, LAP staff have provided educational or preventive talks in 15 separate presentations; most were held for lawyers or judges within the state. Some of these presentations occurred across the nation for other bar associations and the ABA. Our combination of providing comprehensive services through professional and peer counselor evaluation and treatment is viewed "as the most promising prototype" for assisting impaired lawyers (see Margolick's "At the Bar," 6/24/88, New York Times column). This has led to LAP's consulting with nine other state bar associations as they establish or alter their lawyer assistance programs.

Already into the first six months of our second year of operation, LAP staff and peer counselors have been even busier than during the first. Yet we are ready and able to see new clients, so give us a call if there is any need that we may serve. Call (206) 448-0605.

AROUND THE STATE

NEWS FROM HOME

Lynnwood lawyer Edward Hansen has been honored for outstanding community service. Hansen was awarded the Dean Echelbarger Community Service Award by Snohomish County Executive Willis Tucker in October.

Hansen chairs the Snohomish

County Committee for Improved Transportation, and is vice chair of the county Economic Development Council. He chaired the Paine Field Task Force Study on the airport's role, served on the county charter review commission, and was head of the county Democratic Party organization for eight years.

Williams, Kastner & Gibbs has added a former Oregon lawyer to its Vancouver, Washington office. Greg Bessert, a 1985 Gonzaga law graduate with an LL.M. from the University of Florida, will concentrate on tax and estate planning.

The Young Lawyers Division of the Tacoma-Pierce County Bar Association has received national recognition for its members' work as mediators in small claims cases in Pierce County District Court.

The group placed second in the ABA public service awards, says Mark Dyson, a Tacoma lawyer who coordinates the project. The program seeks to promote settlements and help litigants better organize their cases. It began in March.

Seattle lawyer Linda G. Moore has joined the law department of BetaWest Properties, Inc. of Denver. Formerly assistant general counsel to the Rouse Company, a national real estate development company, Moore was in private practice for eight years prior to joining BetaWest. A member of the District of Columbia, Washington and Colorado bar associations, Moore is also a member of the ABA Committee on Real Property and Probate Law and has lectured for the American Law Institute.

BetaWest is a commercial real estate developer with assets of $950 million.

Vancouver, Washington lawyer Alfred A. "Art" Bennett has left the Dan Marsh law firm and set up his own practice. Bennett has been in public and private practice in Vancouver since 1976 and is president of the Domestic Relations Section of the Clark County Bar Association.

Seattle attorney Charles A. Kimbrough has been elected vice president of the Northwest Kidney Center. The first dialysis outpatient center in the world, in 1962, the NKC is the second-largest freestanding dialysis organization in the United States.

Kimbrough, a graduate of Washington State University and the University of Washington School of Law, is a partner in the Seattle law firm of Karr Tuttle Campbell.

Seattle lawyer Margaret McKeown has been elected president of the Legal Foundation of Washington. A partner in the firm of Perkins Coie, McKeown joins Paul Bastine of Spokane (vice president); Ed Holm of

Also joining the Foundation are three new trustees, serving terms ending in 1990: Court of Appeals judge Rosselle Pekelis joins the board by appointment of the Washington Supreme Court; Spokane attorney Frank Hayes Johnson was appointed by the Washington State Bar Association; and Beverly A. Freeman, of Citibank North America, is the appointee of Washington Governor Booth Gardner.

The Seattle law firm of Garvey, Schubert & Barer has pledged $300,000 to the University of Washington School of Law to establish an endowed professorship in the name of the firm. This is the law school's second permanent professorship and the first to be funded by a single law firm. Garvey, Schubert & Barer employs 67 attorneys and has offices in Seattle, Portland and Washington, D.C.

Ken Schubert, one of the firm's senior partners, said the gift was intended to "help maintain the UW law school as the premier center for legal education in the Northwest." He and senior partners Michael Garvey and Stanley Barer are all UW alums, as are one-third of the firm's other partners. He said the firm chose to designate its contribution for a professorship partly because of its own experience: every other summer, a visiting professor from the UW law school comes and works with the firm's attorneys, offering seminars and otherwise sharing knowledge.

Michael F. Fitch, currently head of the Legal Assistant Program at Edmonds Community College, was recently elected as 1988-1989 national president of the American Association for Paralegal Education (AAfPE) at the organization's 13th national conference, "Matching Tradition and New Technology," held in Orlando, Florida.

Fitch, who has been a member of the faculty at Edmonds Community College since 1976, is a member of the Illinois and Washington bars. He is also a member of the American Bar Association and the Seattle-King

MICRONESIA REPORT by STEPHEN A. COHEN

The Micronesian beat goes on.

On the island of Saipan, capital of the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, three more Washington Bar members have joined the Attorney General's Office. The new lawyers, all hailing from King County, are Gail Geiger, Mimi Buescher and Craig Platt. Gail is in the Solicitor's Division while Mimi and Craig are in the Criminal Division. Other Washington Bar members in the Attorney General's Office who have been previously profiled in this column are John F. Biehl, Richard Weil, Stephen A. Cohen, David A. Webber, Ron Hammet, Martin Lovinger, John F. Cool, Larry V. Rogers and Maile Huvar Bruce. In toto, 12 of the 18 lawyers in the Attorney General's Office — 66.7% — belong to the Washington Bar. It is hard to imagine a greater single concentra-

Washington law schools have also figured prominently in the legal externs used in the Attorney General's Office. Student Doug Ogden of the University of Washington School of Law is currently attached to the office. He was preceded by Lee Nelson and Sheryll Bonilla of the University of Washington School of Law and James Hawk of the University of Puget Sound School of Law.

The kudos for this recruiting feat go primarily to John Biehl, the Deputy Attorney General, who engineered it, and Alexandro C. Castro, the Attorney General, who has suffered it to happen.

Elsewhere in the Pacific Basin, Washington Bar members Caroline Crenna and Enere Levi are in the Attorney General's Office of American Samoa, located in the city of Pago Pago. Although the Samoan islands are part of Polynesia and not Micronesia, the two regions have an affinity for each other.

PACIFIC COUNTY REPORT
by ELIZABETH PENOYAR

Pacific County has not reported for 15 years. That is because nothing has happened in 15 years. However, since July 1988 a few changes have occurred, prompting this report:

Herbert E. Wieland retired from the superior court bench. Friends and members of the bar gave him a very "dignified" retirement party. Guy Glenn was appointed to the superior court bench in July. Doug Goelz, Deputy Prosecuting Attorney, was elected to the South District Court bench. August Hahn, South District Court judge, returned to private law practice and public defender work. Joel Penoyar, North District Court judge, was elected in November to the superior court bench. Andrew Monson was appointed to the North District Court bench. Elizabeth Penoyar, public defender for many years, is now a sole practitioner doing civil work.

Attorneys abroad: WSBA members serve in Micronesia.

Now repeat after me:

The North District Court judge is now the superior court judge. The public defender is now in private civil practice. The deputy prosecuting attorney is now South District Court judge. The South District Court judge is doing public defense work. A civil attorney is now North District Court judge.

Jim Finlay and John Wolfe remain in private practice and do not need new letterhead, new offices, new secretaries, or new anything. Mike Sullivan remains the Prosecutor. Congratulations and/or condolences to everyone.

PIERCE COUNTY REPORT
by GEORGE S. KELLEY

A fire extensively damaged the offices of Ron Hendry and Ken Kessler. Rumors are that burglars started the fire having returned to steal what they had missed in an earlier burglary. Fuel for the fire may have been provided by stacks of unreturned phone messages in Kessler's office and by mounds of judicial campaign debts in Hendry's.

We can disclose that the sale price was a lot more than your average judge grosses in a year. Jim claims to have paid $300 for the car more than ten years ago and has been working on it ever since. WASHINGTON ASSOCIATION
OF CRIMINAL DEFENSE LAWYERS
by TERESA MATHIS

Lynnwood attorney Kathryn Lund Ross was selected as the winner of the first William O. Douglas Award, the highest award WACDL presents, in recognition of her outstanding dedication and service to the criminal defense, demonstrated through her involvement in death penalty and other extremely difficult cases. Ross has represented Willi Mak, Charles Robert Bingham, and Darrin Hutchinson. The award, a bust of former U.S. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas created by Oregon artist Steve Parks, was presented at WACDL's December 9 holiday party.

WACDL also presented two Distinguished Service awards, one to a public defender and one to an attorney in private practice. The recipient of the public defender award was Dick Cease, Spokane's head public defender for more than 20 years and a devoted criminal defense lawyer dedicated to the rights of indigent defendants. Tony Savage of Seattle, perhaps the most dedicated criminal defense lawyer in the state—and one who regularly handles some of the most difficult cases—received the second distinguished service award.

Seattle attorney Richard Hansen was presented a special award recognizing his outstanding contribution to WACDL as its president in its first two years. He was given a replica of a writing desk that had been used by William O. Douglas.

Three individuals received Appreciation awards, recognizing their outstanding contributions to WACDL: Steve Hayne, Bellevue attorney, for organizing WACDL's first auction, raising funds, and chairing an excellent seminar about the practice of criminal law; Rick Troberman, Seattle attorney, for his tireless efforts as treasurer during WACDL's first years; and Marilyn Sweeney, who, as a member of Rick Troberman's staff, provided outstanding support to WACDL in its first year.

In addition, Certificates of appreciation for their service to WACDL were awarded: Paul Bernstein, Seattle attorney, for his work as co-chair of WACDL's Publications Committee; Maria Downing, Mountlake Terrace, for her efforts in organizing the WACDL holiday party; Mike Frost, Seattle attorney, for his tireless efforts and ideas that led to the formation of WACDL and contributed to its success; Carole Grayson, Seattle attorney, for her work as co-chair of WACDL's Publications Committee; Karen Klein, Seattle attorney, who as co-chair of the Annual Meeting Committee, made WACDL's 1988 annual meeting in Chelan a tremendous success; Mike Lambo, Seattle attorney, for his work on the WACDL auction and holiday party; David S. Marshall, Seattle attorney, for his work as chair of WACDL's Continuing Legal Education Committee; Teresa Mathis, Seattle, for her work as WACDL's executive director; Adam Moore, Yakima attorney, for his outstanding contribution as a board member and for making the William O. Douglas Award a reality; Katrina Pflaumer, Seattle attorney, for her service as chair of WACDL's white collar crime seminar; Irwin Schwartz, Seattle attorney, for his work on WACDL continuing legal education seminars; Nancy Talner, Bothell attorney, for single-handedly organizing the WACDL brief bank; Mike Trickey, Seattle attorney, for his work as chair of the WACDL Amicus Committee, which included drafting several amicus briefs; Mark Vovos, Spokane attorney, for organizing two successful WACDL seminars in Spokane; Jim Walker, Seattle attorney, for his work on the holiday party; Bob Wayne, Seattle attorney, for his efforts as chair of WACDL's Strike Force Committee; Charlie Williams, Olympia attorney, for two years of dedicated work as chair of WACDL's Legislative Committee; and John Wolfe, Seattle attorney, who, as co-chair of the Annual Meeting Committee, made WACDL's 1988 annual meeting in Chelan a tremendous success.

The Washington Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers was organized in 1986 to improve the quality and administration of justice by supporting and representing criminal defense lawyers.

YAKIMA COUNTY REPORT
by JOSEPH D. HAMPTON

Here Come Da Judge: In mid-December 1988, Governor Gardner appointed Mike Leavitt to serve as superior court judge in the newly-created department. Attorneys expressed happy surprise and some disbelief at the appointment of Leavitt, whom they recommended highly. Evidently the good Governor is capable of reading a bar poll after all.

Familiar Faces, New Places: Phillip W. Wagner has joined the Yakima office of Bogle & Gates, heading the firm's litigation department and concentrating on insurance defense and civil litigation cases. Yakima institution Harry Hazel, attorney and former superior court commissioner, is moving out of his office and into retirement with the bar's best wishes.

Holiday Festivities: The annual bar Christmas party, held December 2, at the Yakima Convention Center, drew over 300 people. The John Heath Players, a troupe of lawyers, judges and others from Spokane, entertained the crowd with musical and Thespian offerings on a legal theme. Congratulations and thanks to Dave Elofson for his fine work in arranging the party.

Tax Break Nuptial: As we go to press, Debbie Daley still plans to marry local attorney Douglas Haynes. Haynes, after consulting his accountant, decided to advance the ceremony to the afternoon of December 31, 1988. Questions as to the sanity of the betrothed parties abound, as the ceremony will take place at 1 p.m. outdoors, at the Arboretum in the midst of what is likely to be a snowy, sub-freezing day. The Honorable F. James Gavin of the superior court will officiate. It is hoped by all that Judge Gavin's words can be heard over the wailing of the hundreds of broken-hearted single women of Yakima who are expected to be present in tearful assemblage. Cheers to the happy couple.

BRIEFLY NOTED

IN MEMORIAM

(The following remembrance was contributed by Bellevue attorney John Peick)

Until recently, Linda Bailey was an insurance defense lawyer working for Lee, Smart, Cook & Patterson. She was a young, hardworking and honest lawyer finding her way into the labyrinths of this profession. She did her homework, represented her clients well; but balanced that adversarial drive with a sense of humor and professional courtesy. She beat the hell out of me in a jury trial about a year ago, and I had the dubious pleasure of facing her again in a slip and fall case.

She was also a woman struggling with cancer. I knew about her struggle not by any complaint she ever made, but because she was a friend and high school classmate of my youngest brother Pat. From her demeanor one would never guess that cancer stalked her; and although I can only imagine the fear she must have fought, she managed a brave smile on every occasion we ever met.

Linda Bailey died in November at the age of 29. She very much wanted to make it to the other side of 30. I wish she had made it. I am going to miss her.

Model Law Firm Partnership Agreements Available On Diskettes

Law firms interested in the issues raised by Richard Monroe's articles on partnership agreements (Bar News, November and December 1988) will be interested to learn such agreements can be prepared in minutes with a word processing diskette produced by the American Bar Association Economics of Law Practice Section (ABA/ELPS). The diskette is based on the best-selling monograph "Model Partnership Agreement for the Small Law Firm."

The model agreement, geared specifically for small firms, contains provisions for profit distribution based on a formula keyed to business origination and work production. Also included are sections on organization and administration; withdrawal, retirement, expulsion, disability or death of a partner; and capital and drawing accounts.

The diskette packet includes both a five-and-one-quarter-inch floppy disc and a three-and-one-half-inch floppy disc. Each disc includes five formats — MultiMate, WordStar, ASCII, WordPerfect and Microsoft Word.

The diskettes can be purchased separately or with the accompanying monograph. Diskettes alone are available to ABA/ELPS members for $29.95, and to nonmembers for $34.95. The charge for the diskettes

“An opportunity to broaden your real estate practice.”

Michael Smith, President, HomeBuyers Realty
Member WSBA

HomeBuyers Realty announces the Cooperative Sale.

It has always been advisable to have an attorney's counsel in a real estate transaction. Unfortunately, many sellers are reluctant to pay for counsel in addition to the commissions paid to real estate agents. This often results in litigation or a less-than-adequate sale.

Now HomeBuyers Realty has created a method by which your clients may enjoy the guidance of your counsel without any additional expense . . . The Cooperative Sale.

When your client sells a property, up to $1,000.00 in attorney's fees are paid upon closing by HomeBuyers Realty. This is done without an increase in the sales commission.

The Cooperative Sale makes sense. Our approach to selling real estate acknowledges the attorney's role in a sale. This is done in an environment that respects the exercise of the attorney's independent professional judgment on behalf of the client.

For the attorney, HomeBuyers Realty represents a valuable resource. Not because we have created a new idea, but because we understood an old one: There is no substitute for the seasoned advice of counsel.

When your clients have real estate to sell, call Michael Smith at 624-1401.
